About Us

The overarching principles that guide our approach are based on integrity, collaboration, empowerment, responsibility and respect. We go the extra mile with our commitment and willingness to deliver a truly positive experience for our business clients.

Since our formation in 2012 as B&G HR our company has changed and evolved. We have worked for large blue chip organisations such as AMEC Foster Wheeler, EDF Energy, NHS, National Coal Board and Experian. This experience was invaluable and has enabled us to share our knowledge with clients of all sizes. In 2017, we re-branded as Amica HR, and although our brand name changed, our core values remained untouched.

Our service is fundamentally based on the highest standards of Human Resource Management, effective communication, trust and a friendly approach. We'll take the time to get to know your business first by listening and talking to you, or visiting you on-site in order to get a full understanding of your needs.

You can be confident that your company is operating in accordance with Employment Law and regulations, enabling you to minimise the risk to your business and creating a healthy workplace with happy employees.

We can be your local HR Department regardless of your location; whether you are a small, medium or large sized business; a retained client or a customer who needs a simple HR advice over the phone. To us, every single client is equally important.

These brand pillars help bring our promise to life. They help us to provide experience that supports you in doing what you love best, without having to worry about employment law changes. It's little things that make the difference.

In the end, it's all about your successful business story.

One of the things that makes us different is that our team of experts are all in-house, working from our offices in Lincoln and London. Meaning you get the consistent support you need, when you need it.

The entire image has a dark, semi-transparent overlay.
